Workers' Compensation FAQs: Part Two, Receiving Your Benefits

In The Khaki Law Firm's newest blog series, we are answering the questions we frequently receive about Workers' Compensation Law in Georgia. More specifically, what exactly is workers' compensation, when should you file a claim, and how The Khaki Law Firm can take the burden of the claims process of your shoulders.

Last month, we discussed what workers' compensation benefits are, when coverage begins, and when to report an accident. In this blog, we are focusing on when you are entitled to benefits, for how long, and what happens if you do not receive those benefits.

1. I was injured while at work, and my employer carries workers compensation insurance. When should I receive my workers' compensation benefits? Once you have reported the accident to your boss and have sought medical treatment, you are entitled to weekly income benefits if you are unable to work for more than seven days. Your check should be mailed to you within 21 days after the first day you missed work.

The Khaki Law Firm's Monthly Success Story

"Our office recently represented two claimants who had prior Unfavorable ALJ decisions. We filed new applications for them, and both clients were scheduled for hearings on the exact same day. While the clients were anxious about their cases (based on previous experiences), our office was able to get both of them approved and both received Bench Decisions. The clients have already started to receive some of their past due and monthly benefits."

The Khaki Law Firm's Social Security Disability Resource Library

The Khaki Law Firm is dedicated to helping disabled workers throughout Georgia win their Social Security Disability (SSDI) benefits. On our website, we provide a collection of free, informational resources. Have you checked out our video library? We have videos covering a range of topics, including: completing a work history report, filling out pre-hearing forms, advice for clients, a full description of the Social Security Disability application process, and what clients can expect at a hearing on benefits.

We hope you had a great Labor Day holiday!

The Khaki Law Firm hopes you and your loved ones had a happy, safe, and relaxing Labor Day holiday weekend!

Labor Day, which is celebrated in the U.S. on the first Monday in September, honors the American labor movement and the contributions that workers have made to the strength and prosperity of the country. It is a federal holiday and considered the unofficial end of the summer. Fall is right around the corner!

Some Final Words of Inspiration...

The Khaki Law Firm would like to take a moment to recognize and honor those emergency workers who put their lives on the line on September 11th, 2001. Many of those firemen, police officers, and other rescue personnel sacrificed their own health and physical well-being in an effort to save others. We will never forget.
